

EPA's 2023 Plans For PFAS: High Costs, Uncertain Rewards

By Brian D. Gross | Max Swetman

January 4, 2023

In a Law360 Expert Analysis article, MG+M The Law Firm Partners Brian Gross and Max Swetman and Associate Arielle Day discuss the US Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) proposed regulations around the use of per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) in industrial and consumer applications and the likely enormous impact on the US economy if these regulations are enacted.

Excerpt: Obviously, there could be extreme ramifications for any company with legacy or current PFAS pollution concerns. Consequently, corporations, insurers, banks, investment firms and private equity firms should keep a close eye on this proposed change in their due diligence calculations of risk. With the EPA road map requiring agency action in 2023, it is clear that these issues will come to a head in the next few months. Without a doubt, the EPA's decision will be challenged by industry. Affected industries should immediately begin assessing the impact on their business to determine whether they wish to file a challenge to the regulations.

Read the full article.

mgmlaw.com

Boston | Boston - State Street | Chicago | Dallas | Hattiesburg | Irvine | Jackson | Los Angeles | Madison County/St. Louis | Miami | New Jersey | New Orleans | New York | Providence | San Francisco | Walnut Creek | Wilmington

Attorney Advertising. This material is for general informational purposes only and does not represent our advice as to any particular set of facts; nor does it represent any undertaking to keep recipients advised of all legal developments. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome. © 2025 Manning Gross + Massenburg LLP